You will help formulate, monitor and review our strategic aims and ensure best practice in governance.

The CIPHE is a registered charity and a professional body of circa 7,500 members. It also has an international presence through its members in some 30 countries as well as the direct support of around 150 manufacturing and merchant companies within the plumbing and heating sector.

Applications are invited from those who are not members of the CIPHE, with an interest in public service and a passion for excellence who can demonstrate:

- Leadership skills gained in the community, business or workplace.
- Strong communication skills – working closely with a wide variety of organisations including Government.
- An understanding of how to set clear objectives and monitor performance.
- The ability to contribute to the formulation of the Institute's strategic direction.

The appointment is for a four year term with a commitment to attend around five meetings a year. The role is unpaid but expenses may be claimed.

If you feel you possess the necessary skills to support the Institute as it embraces the technological challenges that face plumbing and heating engineering, please contact the Chief Executive Officer, Kevin Wellman, for an information pack at:
